Can we put this into perspective?

How many Patriots showed up today?

How many made their way into the Capitol?

How many obeyed the law and left after lame ass curfew?

I'm honestly curious because with that many people I feel like it's not a fraction of what the lame stream media is making it out to be. Oh yeah, nothing was tagged or torched either.

This is what's blowing my mind. It's like people watched different reality than me.

"Fiery but mostly peaceful protests" vs. "violent riotous anarchy in which nothing was damaged and no one was harmed"

We have to arrange boycotts now. One walmart in each city. stand out front and tell consumers its a nationwide consumer counter attack. we have control. they bend the knee.

we can communicate there too. if they take down this site, if they take town our communication. we can plan outside of one walmart, boycott more brands. this is our power,. let it rip a hole in wallstreet,

Once we realize our power, we can take out entire big tech companies in one day with mass account deletions.

I think Trump just wanted Congress to feel the presence of millions of patriots who cared about their republic. Regardless of what happens, he wanted to show Bitch McConnell that we aren't returning to the GOP of yesterday.

I don't think it he wanted a mob to drag Congressmen out onto the streets, unlike what certain people have led others to believe.

I don't even think the mob wanted that. I was there. Only a few loonies were actually advancing the line. The rest just wanted to get closer to make their voices heard. Very few people wanted to hurt anybody

It was peaceful many people standing around, applying first aid to those who had pepper spray in their eyes. What I didn't get was how little police presence there was around 1-2pm. Were they planning on holding a line against a million people with like 10-20 DC police? Likewise I saw zero police at Capitol when arrived

No one was violent except for the DC Thug cop who shot and killed an innocent unarmed woman. Not a single Congressman was hurt. No buildings were set on fire. No monuments were toppled. No stores were looted.

This protest was tame compared to the BLM and Antifa protests that occurred after George Floyd.

The capitol police let hoards of trump supporters inside. They let people in, willingly. There's a couple videos showing small, very small groups of trump supporters fighting police. The giant crowd was let in without incident. It's very, VERY, weird.

I know that my wife watched it live while I was working and she saw everyone get into the building peacefully. I also know someone who was there and I know he gained entry without fighting, but he had to retreat due to massive police resistance in whatever wing he was in.

Agent provocateur's got folks fired up. Lead them thru the corridors of the capitol building. It was a staged event, the poor girl who got shot just got caught up in the moment.

It gave congress the excuse it needed to withdraw their objections to the electoral vote.

The swamp is deep and full of snakes.

Exactly this marching to the capitol does not mean to burn that place down the folks who spend the time and energy to show up were not there to cause problems it's ridiculous that they try to label everyone as rioters when it was a handful out of all the people

And they shot a women veteran that was not even armed, nor was anything life threatened when she was shot did she even get a warning before the shot was fired?

I think the gaslighting was planned and intentional - it will be used as a platform and pretext to either attempt a 25th amendment removal or possibly an impeachment bid.

Remember the big picture: Trump will likely run in 2024. The uniparty has to begin NOW to make SURE he cant be on the ballot. The easy way to assure that? Impeach him. And now his in-party senate support is likely at a low - they MIGHT be able to pass a 2/3 removal.

It will all be based on this bullshit orchestrated narrative of course, as they all are - but another day, another media narrative....

Trump will likely run in 2024.

Maybe, but unlikely. If you think the NWO and its media lapdogs were out to get him during his first term, the ferocity of their attack in a hypothetical 2024 run would be breathtaking. He wouldnt even be permitted through the primaries.

He'll also be, what, 78 in 2024? Even a man of his phenomenal energy would be ready to hang up the sword and shield by then.
